

Suggested Resources for Artwork

Listed below are some internet resources where one can obtain artwork for projection during the performance of Return to Me. Although you are free to search for your own artwork on the web, keep in mind that not all images are free for public use.

When searching within some of these sites, you may get better results by using only one or two words. Words we've tried with good results include "cross," "crucifixion," "Good Friday," "carrying cross," "last supper," etc.

Vanderbilt Divinity Library

On this site, you may search by Lectionary Year and Church Year Season. By clicking ART in the search results table, you will be directed to a page with several choices for artwork, which can be saved to your computer. The use of the art image must be non-commercial and attributed to the artist/photographer.

Web Gallery of Art

By clicking SEARCH at the top of the page, you can search for artwork by artist, title, or keyword (text). Images downloaded from the database can only be used for educational and personal purposes.

Flickr

You can use Flickr to search and download images, but it is advised that you use those images that are found in the Creative Commons section. Images found under various licenses may be used for non-commercial purposes if credit is given.

Art and the Bible

This site links scripture to works of art. The pieces of art may be too small to use for a slideshow; however, they could be used as a reference for finding larger pictures on the web.

Free Christ Images

This site makes searching very easy. You can search by bible story or by verse. The images on this site are free for non-commercial purposes.

Dreamstime

You'll need to register for a free account with a username and password. Some high resolution images are free. Others are available for a very reasonable fee.

Creation Swap

This site features contemporary church media shared or sold by Christian artists and graphic designers and is specifically designed for church use. Some artwork is free, and others are available for a small fee. Photoshop files may be manipulated to suit your needs.
